

Harvest Harmony: The Grasshopper and the Ants' Wisdom

Once upon a time, on a sunny autumn day, a family of busy Ants were outside. They were sorting out their food, which they had gathered all summer. Along came a hungry Grasshopper with a tiny violin. He asked the Ants if he could have a little food.

The Ants were surprised and asked, "Didn't you save any food for winter? What were you doing when it was warm?"

"I was playing music and didn't save any food," said the Grasshopper sadly.

The Ants shook their heads and said, "You played music instead of working? Well, now you can dance." And they went back to their work, leaving the Grasshopper alone.

The story teaches us that it's important to work when it's time to work and play when it's time to play.